CRONOBACTER/ENTEROBACTER SAKAZAKII

CRONOBACTER/ENTEROBACTER SAKAZAKII

What are the symptoms of Cronobacter/Enterobacter sakazakii infection in an infant?

Infants, especially those who are premature, low-birth-weight, and/or immunocompromised, are at a higher risk for contracting fatal or seriously debilitating Cronobacter/Enterobacter sakazakii (E. sakazakii) infection from powdered baby formula.

Powdered infant formula is a commercially non-sterile product which can contain the potentially lethal bacteria, Cronobacter/Enterobacter sakazakii. Signs and symptoms of an Cronobacter/Enterobacter sakazakii infection include but are not limited to:

- meningitis leading to ventriculitis (inflammation of the brain cavity)
- brain abscess
- infarction (death of brain tissue)
- cyst formation in the brain
- conjunctivitis (inflammation of the clear membrane that coats the inner aspect of the eyelids and the outer aspect of the eye)
- bulging fontanelles (soft spots)
- destruction of the frontal lobes of the brain
- seizures
